What is a pull request?

Pull requests let you tell others about changes you've pushed to a repository on GitHub. Once a pull request is sent, interested parties can review the set of changes, discuss potential modifications, and even push follow-up commits if necessary.

The screenshot shows the GitHub interface for a repository. At the top, the repository name is 'AlphaHydrae / Teaching-HEIGVD-CM_WEBS-2016-Project', noted as being forked from 'SoftEng-HEIGVD/Teaching-HEIGVD-CM_WEBS-2016-Project'. Action buttons for 'Watch' (0), 'Star' (0), and 'Fork' (11) are visible. Below these, navigation tabs include 'Code', 'Pull requests' (0), 'Wiki', 'Pulse', 'Graphs', and 'Settings'. The 'Pull requests' tab is highlighted with a red circle. Below the navigation bar, there are filter controls with a search bar containing 'is:pr is:open', and buttons for 'Labels' and 'Milestones'. A green button labeled 'New pull request' is also circled in red. The main content area features a large icon of two branches merging, followed by the heading 'Welcome to Pull Requests!'. A paragraph explains that pull requests help with collaboration and that they will appear in a searchable and filterable list, with a link to 'create a pull request'.

Comparing changes

Choose two branches to see what's changed or to start a new pull request. If you need to, you can also compare across forks.

The screenshot shows the GitHub 'Comparing changes' interface. At the top, there are two dropdown menus for selecting branches. The first dropdown is labeled 'base fork: SoftEng-HEIGVD/Teaching...' and has 'base: master' selected. The second dropdown is labeled 'head fork: AlphaHydrae/Teaching-HEI...' and has 'compare: master' selected. Both dropdowns are circled in red. Below these, a green checkmark indicates 'Able to merge. These branches can be automatically merged.' A green button labeled 'Create pull request' is visible. A callout box with a black border and a pointer to the 'base: master' dropdown contains the text: 'This means that you want to pull your master branch into our master branch.' Below the callout, the interface shows '1 commit' and '1 file changed'. A commit by 'AlphaHydrae' is listed, showing a change to 'readme.' with commit hash 'd87937e'. At the bottom, a diff view for 'README.md' is shown, indicating 7 changes (4 additions, 3 deletions). The diff shows a header for 'COMEM Web Services 2016 Project' and a URL for the course.
